Brand Manager Bootcamp 2026

The 12-week training programme P&G gives grads. Now for start-up brand managers.

About Brand Manager Bootcamp:

Brand Manager Bootcamp is 12 weeks of structured brand management training for marketers at start-ups and scale-ups who never had formal training. P&G, Unilever and Diageo built programmes to teach their brand managers the fundamentals before trusting them to run a campaign alone. Most start-ups don't have anything like it. BMBC closes that gap. Starting 3rd September, it's led by Lottie (founder of Up World and Brand Hackers), with specialist clinics from Brand Hackers experts on CRM, paid social, organic social and paid ads.

What your team member gets:

8 live lectures with Lottie	Brand strategy, marketing planning, briefing creative, ways of working, channel selection, career development and measurement
4 live clinics with Brand Hackers	Working sessions on CRM, paid social, organic social and paid ads — the channels most brand managers are expected to own but rarely get properly taught
8 podcast episodes	Conversations with senior marketers across the 12 weeks including Lizzie Stainaio (TOTM), Ruth Fittock and Lauren Spearman
Weekly worksheets	Practical exercises to apply learning directly to their role — not notes they'll never revisit
Course Slack group	Access to the full cohort throughout the 12 weeks for questions, feedback and accountability
3 months' free Up Club membership	Access to Up Club's 1,000+ startup marketer community, monthly industry talks and training hub
Up Club Christmas Party ticket	November celebration for the cohort at the end of the programme

Who delivers it:

Lottie — Up World & Brand Hackers

Lottie led marketing at PROPER, doubling revenue in three years. She has run brand strategy for Pip & Nut, Innermost, Folc and Elizabeth Scarlett, advised over 100 start-up brands and has run the Marketing Accelerator for six years. BMBC is the course her community has asked her to bring back more than any other.

Brand Hackers — clinic specialists

The four channel clinics are run by Brand Hackers, the fractional marketing agency working with start-up and scale-up brands on strategy and execution. The clinic leads are practitioners actively doing this work with real brands — not trainers delivering theory.

One place on BMBC costs less than a day of most marketing consultants' time. It gives your team member 12 weeks of structured training across brand strategy, channel management, briefing, ways of working and career development — the foundations most start-up marketers never get.

What previous cohorts say:

> "I found this course to be super beneficial to my role. By breaking down all the different stages of brand building and planning, I was able to apply the modules to my real life work. I planned a product launch campaign using the templates and exercises on the course. I feel much more confident in my role with the knowledge and skills I've gained. Would 100% recommend."

Frequently asked questions:

Why can't they learn this on the job?

They probably are. The question is how many avoidable mistakes that takes. BMBC gives them the frameworks that would take years to piece together otherwise — and saves them (and you) the cost of those mistakes.

Is the time commitment manageable around a full-time role?

Yes. Sessions run Thursday evenings and worksheets are designed to take 30–60 minutes per week. The course runs 12 weeks from 3rd September to 18th November.

What's the return on this for the business?

A brand manager with proper training writes better briefs, gives clearer feedback to agencies, builds strategies that connect to commercial outcomes and manages their workload more effectively. £899 is less than a day of most marketing consultants' fees.

What if they leave after the course?

The skills make them more effective in their current role regardless of what comes next. The 3 months' Up Club membership also gives them ongoing access to a 1,000+ member community of startup marketers to keep learning from.
